what it might be. If you ever had occasion for a temper, this will be it. Please remember that that is part of the selective draft. Some people like Miss Lennon, we drive into matrimony; others like yourself we ban to the stockyards of Chicago. Only I get away with a beautiful office that has just been assigned to me. It is always thus with the male sex.

About Miss Myers. I had kept her here from day to day thinking that she would go right down to Washington with you. Just what arrangement we can now make with her, I do not know. But I think that there will be plenty of work here between now and July first, so that we can keep her till your return from Chicago.

You are right about the cheapness of the paper. The printer got some of my own choice vocabulary in return. Won't you please write me upon receipt of this letter, or better still telegraph me, whether you claim exemption on conscientious grounds, or whether we can send you to the Chicago trenches.

Always faithfully yours,

Luna T. Lochner
